ANTARCTIC AIRFIELDS

Summary

The listing that follows contains information on airfields located on the Antarctic continent. It includes the location of airfields or airstrips and data on the runways and landing areas. Information not available is marked N/A; this is often the case for small or temporary airstrips. Data on larger airfields is more comprehensive. Information on runway surfaces is derived mainly from annual reports published by each country, which may use the terms "ice" and "snow" interchangeably. In addition, there are prepared and unprepared landing areas for helicopters at many Antarctic research stations. []

Antarctica: Territorial Claims and Research Stations

Note: Seven of the 14 Antarctic Treaty consultative nations have made no claims to Antarctic territory (although the Soviet Union and the United States have reserved the right to do so) and do not recognize the claims of the other nations. Brazil, an acceding nation, has designated a zone of interest.
